Kokoda Caravans has recently been notified by Swift Appliances of a potential recall on their Swift 500 series cooker. Please note at this stage this would affect owners in WA only. Swift has ensured us that they are working with the local government bodies to attend to the matter and notify us as soon as possible.

The WA Building and Energy Authority has directed anyone in WA discontinue using the cooker effective immediately until otherwise instructed.

The current known details are that after an examination carried out by Building and Energy on units provided by Swift is that the Swift Caravan Cooker 500 series that have aluminium tubing may be susceptible to a circumference fracture at the flare compression fitting on the front left burner. To date there have been two incidents on the following models:

- 503BHSP – July 2021
- 502BHSP – April 2022

Both of these units have a 2019 manufacturing date.

At the moment we are unsure if and how this will affect other states/territories and that as of today NO OFFICIAL RECALL HAS BEEN ISSUED as the matter is currently under review.

Please visit our website kokodacaravans.com.au as we will post updates as they become available.

We appreciate your patience as we await instruction from the appropriate persons in this matter.

As a reminder, this currently only affects owners in WA and NO RECALL HAS BEEN ISSUED as of today.
